

Another Case of Chiropractesia

Jill is an adventurous, spunky, direct, kind woman who loves her family and America. She and her family own a business called Focus Design where they provide beautiful lighting solutions to residential and commercial spaces. Jill loves sports, gardening, and pursuing a healthy lifestyle...She and her husband enjoy doing hot yoga together. Jill first started care due to stiffness in her neck that led to some popping and discomfort after a long car ride to Colorado. Jill decided to join her husband, son, and sister-in-law and come in for chiropractic care at Revolution to address this stiffness. After about a month of specific chiropractic care, Jill was already seeing improvements in her neck. When it came time for her assessment, she was asked about the other issues she had going on when she came in to start care...and she had forgotten she ever had the issues! (Another case of chiropractesia). These “forgotten” issues were nerve pain in her foot (Morton’s Neuroma), bladder pain, and hip pain. She was thrilled to have had these issues resolved and less pain overall.

“I have improved tremendously since I started getting regular adjustments.”
